Academic Year 2020-21

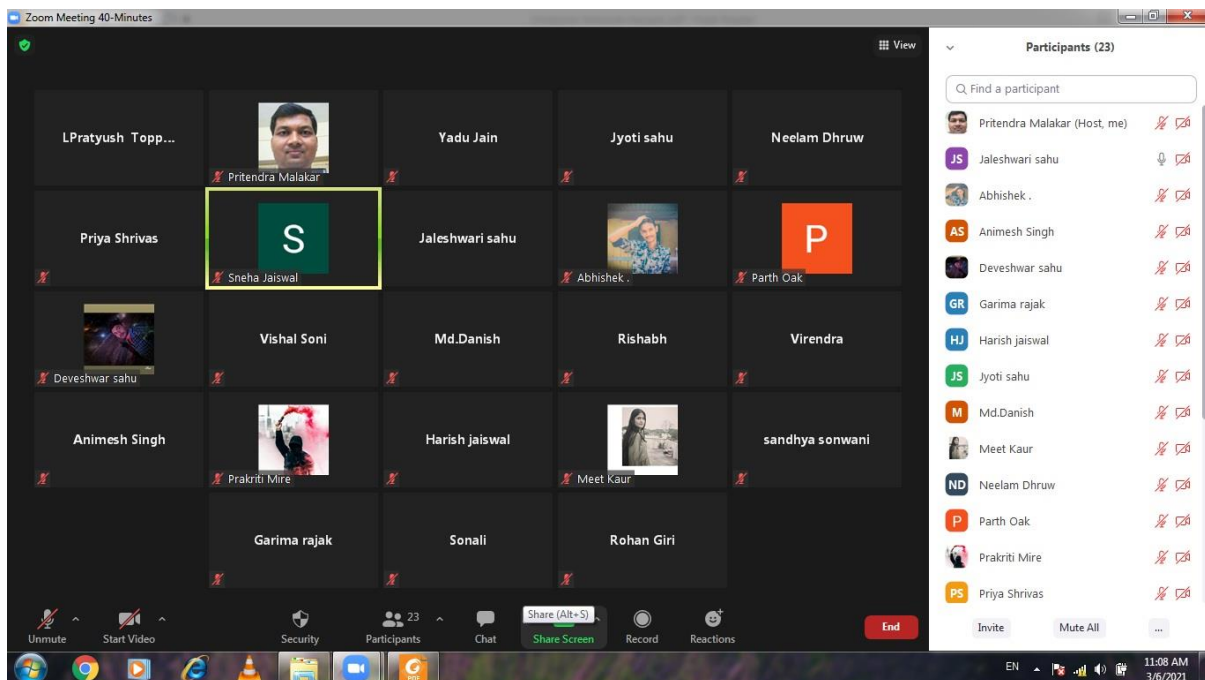

The COVID pandemic took the world by storm, creating a domino effect on several medium-scale, small-scale industries and individuals. The strain on businesses led to job losses and taking a financial hit. Those who had lost their jobs or took a massive salary cut had to depend on their savings to pay the necessary bills. But as industries adapted themselves to the current scenario, many saw positive growth, instigating the need for better financial management and literacy. Simultaneously, the pandemic opened opportunities in personal finance as people were encouraged to seek advice from professionals who could help them accurately invest their money.

Covid-19 has impacted the financial markets dramatically. The risk and return expectations of millennials have changed, leading them to reallocate their portfolios. As the world heads towards a slowdown, with share markets and few countries facing economic downturns, there are uncertainties and strong beliefs that have practically divided the world into optimists and pessimists. There are some investors who make rash, seemingly opportunistic investment decisions and are very calculative in their financial approach. Those who unwittingly indulge in herd behavior, and those who are less prone to external influences in the market. This time around, people are more open to guidance and understanding the right way to invest and save their accumulated wealth. The pandemic allowed many professionals to learn and unlearn skills while working from home. Many developed interest in personal finance and wanted to invest their hard earned money in stocks to increase their income.

In this regard, Department of Commerce and Management under the aegis of IQAC, Dr. C.V. Raman University, Kota, in collaboration with B. Incube start-up Incubation Center, Bilaspur has conducted a e-seminar on 03rd June 2021 on “Post Pandemic Opportunities and Growth in the Field of Finance: An Overview of Mudrabiz Finance”.
